COWEN ANSWERS IN STYLE.

PARTI-COLORED. BOUND AND IN-DEXED APOLOGIA TO GROUT.

He Fries His Enemies in One Tint and Justifies Himself in Another-Compliments to Grout's "Underlings"-Commissioners Say Not Guilty, But-

When the City Record board meets to-day Supervisor Philip Cowen will submit his reply to the charges made against him by Comptroller Grout and T. B. Sidebotham, Jr., the city printer. Mr. Cowen's report consists of 100 printed pages on paper of different colors for the various heads under which he divides his defence, and it is carefully bound and indexed. As Mr. Cowen has had a large number of these vloumes printed it is understood that Mr. Grout will ask to-day who is going to pay for them. In the first paragraph Mr. Cowen points out that his administration of the City Record office for 1902 results in a saving of nearly $150,000 over preceding years. Having made that point Mr. Cowen remarks: "Practical business men will not charge such an administration with incompetence, however it may strike expert investigators who are innocent of mercantile business experience; nor will they believe it merits the petty treatment which this report shows it has been constantly given by shows it has been constantly given by underlings of the Finance Department."

The "underlings" referred to by Mr. Cowen are R. B. McIntyre, the expert who undertook the investigation for the Finance Department, and John R. Keefe, the examiner of the Comptroller's office attached to the City Record office. Mr. Cowen lays most of his troubles at the door of Mr. Keefe. He asserts, in fact, that the investigation was started by Mr. Keefe, and of this official he says:

Mr. Keefe's previous training scarcely and of this official he says:

Mr. Keefe's previous training scarcely fitted him for passing on the quality of goods supplied by the City Record office. From the first day that he entered the place he let it appear that he represented within himself the dignity and power of the great department with which he was connected, and consequently was deeply impressed with a due sense of his own importance. As I complained to Mr. Grout at one time, Mr. Keefenstead of encouraging friendly relations with the Supervisor, as should properly subsist between him and the representatives of the Finance Department, so that they might labor together for the best interests of the city and protect it from unfair contractors—has conceived it to be his duty to look upon the Supervisor himself as the arch-conspirator against whom he must protect the city.

mr. Cowen makes the direct charge that the friction between himself and the Finance Department was caused by Examiner Keefe. Then Mr. Cowen proceeds to write the following paragraph:

In the course of this investigation a batch of requisitions for printing were not to be found. I was told by Mr. McIntyre finally that these must be found, as he was about to conclude his investigation—this was about six weeks before receipt of the report; that the loss of these requisitions must give a bad look to things; it was suspicious in view of the examination. That unless they were found and delivered to him the next day he would have a formal demand made for them by the Comptroller, and then I could answer for them as I chose. Evidently these missing requisitions were at one time to be the crucial point in the report. Returning to the City Hall office, where search had been made for these time and again, I offered a reward for these time and again, I offered a reward for these time and again, I offered a reward for these time and again, I offered a reward for these time and again, I offered a reward for these time and again. Hen several of the employees recalled seeing Mr. Keefe place these requisitions where they were found. A certain incident in connection therewith impressed this upon them so that they could not be mistaken.

The Supervisor pays his compliments In the course of this investigation a batch

The Supervisor pays his compliments to Mr. McIntyre in this manner: The Supervisor pays his compliments to Mr. McIntyre in this manner:

Of Mr. R. B. McIntyre, who has had charge of this investigation, I will say that if he is not a relative of Mr. Sidebotham, as I have been informed, there is between them at least that close bond of friendship and intimacy which most men account as stronger than the ties of blood. I am told that during the progress of this investigation Mr. Sidebotham has been in frequent, if not daily, attendance in the office of Mr. McIntyre, and I have reason to believe in connection with the same. In the conduct of this investigation Mr. McIntyre has disregarded the rights of the Supervisor by taking out of his office papers without his permission and without the opportunity of making note of what papers were so taken, as well as in endeavoring to extort from an employee, under fear and compulsion, while he knew of his positive knowledge that the Supervisor was absent, information that Mr. Mointyre believed might in jure him, although the Supervisor was always ready to give the fullest assistance in the investigation. He has gone around to contractors and to officers of the city, or has sent others, apparently with the deliberate purpose of stirring up hostility and complaint against the Supervisor—the report shows with what success.

Then through ninety pages of printed

Then through ninety pages of printed matter Mr. Cowen proceeds to answer, matter Mr. Cowen proceeds to answer, with the aid of much documentary evidence, the charges which were made against him of incompetency, of restricting competition to favored bidders and of giving emergency orders to certain firms which belong to what is known as the "Tammany printing ring." Whatever errors he may have made, he contends, are overshadowed by the great saving he has effected in the have made, he contends, are overshadowed by the great saving he has effected in the expense of running his department.

At the time the Comptroller submitted his charges to the Board of City Record the Mayor directed the Commissioners of Ac-counts to make an independent investiga-tion. The report of the Commissioners will be read at to-day's meeting. While for the most part it exonerates Mr. Cowen of the accusations lodged against him, it of the accusations lodged against him, it condemns some of his acts. It is shown that out of 147 awards for emergency work, let without competition, 94 went to the Martin B. Brown Company and 18 to the J. W. Pratt Company. The remaining 35 orders were distributed among 12 firms. As an offset to the apparent favoritism thus shown the Commissioners state that 1,039 orders for emergency work were put up for competition and in every instance the award was made to the lowest bidder. The Commissioners have failed to find evidence of collusion have failed to find evidence of collusion between bidders. The Commissioners also find that there are no grounds for the charge that Mr. Cowen, in the specifications he drew for the quality of paper, practically created a monopoly for the paper supply firm of Lasher & Lathrop. The Supervisor, however, is condemned for delays in forwarding bills to the Finance Department, as a result of which there has been dilatorias a result of which there has been dilatori as a result of which there has been dilatoriness in the payment to contractors for work done for the city. The Commissioners wind up their report by stating that there has been an improvement in the conduct of the City Record under Mr. Cowen because there was a saving of $114,275 in 1902 over 1901 in the cost of the administration, and a decrease in averages of $137,499 in 1903 as compared with 1902.

SCHOOLMA'AMS SEE NEW YORK. Don't See Why They Should Pay for Food and Enrich the Walters, Too. While those of Manhattan's people who nadn't left the island for cooler climes were taking their Sunday morning doze ar invading army from Boston reached town. The dispersing hosts of the schoolteachers' convention moved down on Manhattan by boat and by rail, and before New Yorkers had called for their cantaloups and coffee the schoolma'ams had vainly bombarded the food fortresses of the golden text variety, and finding them closed for Sunday foraged elsewhere. They filled up the Broadway restaurants, crowded the street cars, seized the Seeing New York vehicles and proceeded to see and analyze Man-

Waiters learned to shun the badgewearers. Twelve of them, ten woman and two men, gathered around tables in a Broadway hotel. Three waiters served the party and the men collected per capita from all, giving the waiters thirty cents to divide among themselves. Two Minneapolis miskle took breakfast together at another Broadway place and walked to the door with all the change. There they consulted and liberality won the day. The one who had paid the check came back and called out softly: "Walter!

The scowl passed from the man's face and he approached smilingly. Between her thumb and forefinger the teacher held a coin which she benignly dropped into the waiter's palm. It was a shining new nickel.

IN HONOR OF THE COUNTESS.

LUNCHEON TO LADY MINTO GIVEN BY OGDEN MILLS.

Dinner Given in Her Honor by Lispenard Stewart-Mrs. Clews and Mrs. Fish to Give Entertainments for Her Sunday Night Concerts in Newport.

NEWPORT, R. I., July 12 .- Much of the me of society was taken up to-day in the entertainment of the Countess of Minto and Lady Eileen Elliott, her daughter. This morning the visitors attended service at Trinity Church with ex-Senator Wolcott and were then driven to Ocean View, the residence of Ogden Mills, where a luncheon was given in their honor. These were present: Countess of Minto, Lady Fileen Elliott, Mr. and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid. Miss Anna Sands, Mrs. Richard Gambrill. Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton McKay Twombly, Mr. Wolcott, Worthington Whitehouse, Lispenard Stewart, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Henry Bull, Percy Wyndham, Henry Norman, Ogden Mills, Jr., and D

This evening a dinner was given in their honor by Lispenard Stewart at White Lodge, the table decorations being pink roses. The guests at the dinner were the Countess of Minto, Lady Eileen Elliott, Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Jay, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clews, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Mortimer Mrs. Duncan Elliott, Miss Anna Sands, Miss Alice Blight, Mr. Wolcott, Percy Wyndham, Henry Norman and Capt. Woodbury Kane. To-morrow night Mrs. Henry Clews will give an entertainment in their honor. Probably the most elaborate affair given for the Countess during her stay in Newport will be the dinner given on Tuesday evening by Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish. There will be sixty guests and it is understood that the table decorations will be as elab- | SOLDIER HELD FORGIRL'S DEATH. orate as ever seen in Newport. The guests of honor will be seated at a large round table with the hostess while the other guests will occupy round tables around the room. There will be a vaudeville show following the dinner to which a large number of the cottagers will come.

Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish gave a luncheon to-day to thirty-eight guests at Crossways. They were seated at a large square The table decorations were white flowers in gold vases and the famous Fish gold service was used.

A luncheon was also given to-day by Senator and Mrs. George Peabody Wetmore in honor of Senator and Mrs. Marcus A.

in honor of Senator and Mrs. Marcus A. Hanna, the table decorations being white sweet peas placed in silver vases.

Cottage dinners were given to-night by Mrs. E. Moore Robinson and Mr. Egerton L. Winthrop.

To-night marked the opening of the Sunday night concerts at the Casino, and although a ligh train came up after the concert had begun, it did not mar the pleasure of the large number attending. The grounds were illuminated with thousands of tiny electric lights. During the progress of tiny electric lights. During the progress of the concert several of the cottagers entertained at dinner on the grill room plazzas, among them being Mrs. Frederic Natleon

Neilson.

It was learned to-day that the wedding of Miss Gladys Brooks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Morttmer Brooks, and Eugene V. R. Thayer, Jr., will take place at Newport on Sept. 10 and that it will be the large society wedding of the season. The ceremony will be performed at Trinity Church. It was reported at Newport to-day that William K. Vanderbilt has decided to give up yachting, and that he will offer his steam yacht Valiant for sale. It is understood that he offered it to a well-known yachtsman, who is to build a new yacht.

Col. and Mrs. John Jacob Astor will arrive at Newport during the week in the steam yacht Nourmahal and will occupy the Havemeyer villa Friedhelm at once. Senator and Mrs. Chauncey M. Depew will spend part of the season at Newport and will occupy apartments at the New Cliffs.

Detective Catches Him in a Station With the Help of a Photograph.

Harold C. Weller, a sergeant in the Eightysecond Company of United States Artillery, which is stationed at Fort Totten, Willets Point, was in the Yorkville police court yesterday as the result of the death in Flower Hospital on Saturday of Lucille Crawford following a criminal operation. When Capt. Tighe and Detective Byrnes went to the girl's home on Saturday they found a photograph of the girl and a soldier. The girl wouldn't tell the man's name. Byrnes took the photograph and started to make a round of the forts in this neighborhood.

While in the Long Island railroad station he saw a soldier who looked like the photograph leave an incoming train and arrested him.

In his affidavit Byrnes said that the sergeant had admitted that he took the Crawford girl to a house on East Fifty-third street, where an operation was performed. The sergeant was held without ball for examination to-day.

Crabbing Parties Busy on the Hudson. Crabbing has begun earlier than usual in the Hudson and Harlem rivers this year The crabs are so small yet that veterans all it a sin to take them, but the small boy doesn't hesitate about committing it. Near Edgewater and along the shore at Fort Lee yesterday, there were crabbing parties by the dozen and the harvest was large in quantity if not in first rate in quality. The crabs are so numerous already that fishermen along the river predict a fine crabbing season later, if all the crabs are not caught before they mature. caught before they mature.
